

Contents

Acknowledgments.....	9
Introduction	11
1.0. Why does consumption matter?	11
2.0. The origins of sustainable consumption.....	16
3.0. Why is the sustainable change necessary?	18
4.0. Purpose and structure of this study.	20
 Chapter 1. Anthropology	 27
1.0. Definition of man.	29
2.0. Anthropological decadence of modernity.	31
2.1. Alienation from the world.....	31
2.1.1. Flight from the world to the cosmos.	32
2.1.2. Flight from the world to the inner life of self.	33
2.2. Primacy of «vita activa» over «vita contemplativa».	34
2.3. Turning point within the structure of «vita activa».	35
2.4. The rise of «homo consumens»	40
3.0. Homo economicus: «a rational utility maximizer».	48
3.1. The birth of the social sphere.	48
3.2. Adverse consequences of «homo economicus»-based reasoning.	53
4.0. Thomas Hobbes: «unlimited competitive materialism».....	57

Chapter 2. Ecology (Summary)	69
1.0. The ultimate reasons for environmental damage.	69
2.0. How are we doing with ecological depletion?	70
3.0. «Economy of permanence».....	71
4.0. Moral values of «the economy of permanence».	73
 Chapter 3. Economy (Summary)	77
1.0. A new philosophy of work.....	77
2.0. More service, less goods	79
3.0. The next industrial revolution.	80
4.0. Corporate social responsibility as remedy to consumerism. ...	82
 Chapter 4. Social-Political Issues (Summary)	85
1.0. Consumerism as social disintegration.	85
2.0. Pernicious structural culprits of the consumer society.....	86
3.0. Social limits to growth.	86
4.0. Community, citizenship and democratization of consumption.	87
5.0. What role should politics play in sustainable consumption? .	88
6.0. Dynamics of social-political change.	88
 Chapter 5. Consumption & The Good Life	91
1.0. Income, consumption and happiness.....	92
1.1. Economic proofs evidencing the discontinuity between income, consumption and happiness.	93
1.2. Non-economic reasons behind the discontinuity between income consumption and happiness.....	97
1.3. Needs, wants and (dis)satisfaction.	104
1.3.1. The proximate causes of confused needs.	104
1.3.2. The ultimate causes of confused needs.	107

2.0. A wide vision of happiness.	111
3.0. Major paradigms of fulfilling life.	115
3.1. The case of «Pala Island».	121
4.0. Towards a pro-sustainable education.	124
4.1. Why do advanced societies need moral education?	124
4.2. Why is the prevailing model of consumer education unsatisfactory?	128
4.3. Paideia and kaloskagathia : paramount ideals of pro- sustainable human formation.	133
4.4. University as nerve centre of pro-sustainable education.....	139
Conclusions	147
1.0. Final remarks.....	147
2.0. Further study and research.	156
Bibliography	159
Full contents of the dissertation	175